FALLER DRESSES—DIAGONALS.

Some voluminous, waist-restraining textures, that will not wrinkle or cockle, are the chief features of the very large Diagonals to which we now invite attention. The price per yard, the lowest in Autumn dress materials, we have as yet. Customers can depend on our placing a yard of dress material where they are able to place a yard of dress more public for the quality of which we cannot vouch; so Diagonal, we think, the best we have ever offered.

FALLER DRESSES.—BRIGES.

Depend upon us, we will be the fabric, par excellence, during season. With few exceptions, there are no materials that wear as equal to them, certainly none at so low a price when they are made up. They are also well adapted for a season's wear don't look shabby. You may get real

If you know, but will not look any the worse for it, accepting of it, and then, if you can, to get it out of the way, and do nothing to be co-operated with our ratings at 10 and a yard. Patterns are now ready for customers in the city, and it is much to be regretted that we cannot get to country orders. Some in India, viz., "That remittance must accompany country orders." THE OXFORD-STREET TRAMWAY.

of a street in Manchester at a cost of £550,000, for the purpose of widening the street for tramway traffic. (Lear, hear.) Such a project in London would be a mere trifle. I should have liked to see a London Corporation two years ago to convince people here to adopt a plan which became quite common in other cities. (Lear, hear.)

Mr. FITZMAURICE moved as an amendment, "That the Corporation of London be authorised to meet with the appropriation of this meeting." He said that all this disturbance about the tramway emanated from half-a-dozen shopkeepers and others in the Strand who were present at this occasion were in Parliament when this line up Oxford street was made, and why did they not then raise objections? After some further remarks, said disturbances were of no value.

Mr. McEILHON rose to order. The meeting had rallied to consider an important question, and not to discuss the merits of the proposed line. He said that the Mayor then put the question whether Mr. Fitzgerald should be heard, and the question was decided in the negative.

Mr. JAMES COLLINS supported the resolution.

Mr. McEILHON said that he had supported the Government in the construction of tramways, but if he had any idea that the tramways would have done so much harm to the city, he would not have supported the Government in regard to the tramway system. If a second line of rails were laid down in Oxford-street, it would ruin the business of the people in that street. The Corporation had no right to do this. The public holidays, as he believed it would be far better to have a number of carriages built, and run them at short intervals with bus passengers, than to have a line of rails laid down in the street with the great nuisance. Steam tramways might be in the suburbs, but not in the principal streets of the city. (Lear, hear.)

Mr. Fitzgerald not being seconded, the resolution was put to the meeting and declared to be carried unanimously.

Mr. WILKINSON moved,—"That the Government be authorised to appropriate a considerable portion of Oxford street by the construction of the present single line,

Having determined to construct a second or double track, the meeting then proceeded to consider the question of the "interests of a large section of the community, and that the Government should take other steps to accommodate the traffic." (Cheers.) He had it in mind to refer to the reference to the "other ways." He had felt of the vehicular traffic of the city; but to a great extent that had been taken away with owing to the construction of the new line, and he referred to the "other ways" of persons who drove about for pleasure or prosecution of their business. The Government had proposed to put a second line down in Oxford-street, and he thought that it would be better if they had taken four yards of the street and made it much wider. (Cheers.) For years past the Government had been asked to reserve space on the ground so that they might have a second line, so, though it would have greatly relieved the traffic in Oxford-street. If the street were widened there would be a uniformity of building erected with the street, and much to the value of the property. (Cheers.)

Mr. Alderman LYS seconded the motion, and pointed out that the object of the meeting was to consider the question of the traffic, and that the Government had proposed to put a second line down in Oxford-street, and not to advocate the widening of the street. (Hear, hear.) But the fact was that the traffic must be accommodated by a single line on the street, and the street be widened accordingly.

The resolution was put and declared to be unanimously carried.

Mr. MOORE moved a resolution, suggesting that the Government should make a road, supplanting the footway in Oxford-street, while loop lines might also be made in Dartington-road, Burton, and College streets. This was a motion to obviate the necessity of a second line, and he thought the widest do away altogether with the second Oxford-street. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. HENRY CASSELL seconded the resolution, and said that the Government would be highly beneficial to the interests of the community.

The resolution was agreed to unanimously.

Mr. G. H. REID, M.L.A., moved the adoption of

"Sir,—Advertising to the deputation in opposition to the widening of Oxford-street, which waited upon the Colonial Secretary on the 22nd ultimo, I am directed to inform you that the matter has been under the consideration of the Government, and that the proposed work does not appear to be one which the Government should be justified in undertaking.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, CRITCHETT WALKER.

THE ANTI-CHINESE MEETING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir.—I would beg to protest against the gross misrepresentation of the intelligence, civilization, and religion of our country, which occurred last Thursday evening at an anti-Chinese meeting. I hope that neither the Chinese nor other strangers in the city that inspired such a meeting expressed the feelings or sentiments of the people of this country. I should regard it as a reproach to our civilization and religion if that meeting were pointed to as representative of what our boasted advancement has accomplished. It was indeed a disgraceful scene, and one that its own tails in the speeches which were uttered; but it is no right to speak to others who repudiate its views, and deny its capacity to deal fairly with the question of meeting.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, mighty man. His appearance everywhere, specifically about everything, may entitle him to be known as the "New Captain," but it is the man who speaks of the Chinese men who are the question. His capacity may be judged of by one of the non-sensational fights, which the meeting cheered with a prolonged cheering. He said, "I would rather see the men of this country, whose lives are to be sacrificed, than in fact, destroyed, rather than that they should be decimated by this accused race." It is clear that the new war-deimated had tickled him, and the expression "decimated" had uttered the nonsense of prerring that the "men" of women of these countries should be wounded and destroyed rather than that "one in every ten" of them should be decimated.
J. H. WILSON.

Then, Mr. Angus Cameron, from whom better things were to be expected—followed in a similar strain. He thinks Chinese," remarkable for nothing but for growing cabbage and mutton, and for being a "people of the country, and scatter" the people of this country. The operation would be curious. He is not afraid of the British aristocracy being "rubbed out of existence by any people," but "if the people of this country" will take "the better man's bread and the shoes and stockings of our children" away from them, "It is quite sure that the British aristocracy will be rubbed out of existence by the people of this country." He is quite sure for growing cabbage; and yet he beats Mr. O'Connor, considering the time, if the "accursed race" allowed to come here, when they will, as they are also a very "valuable people," and "will take away some of our mutton" and other arts, that our own people "will wake up some of our morning" and find their lives and their liberties consigned. Besides talking nonsense, Mr. Cameron did not shrink from the "valuable people" of the "accursed race" being "rubbed out of existence," and he alluded to "ministers of religion."

meeting, I feel as if the intelligence and civilization of the religion of the country were compromised. Is there no other way than this? Is there no other solution of our difficulties? The intelligence of our country is scandalously lowered by the crude and brutal spirit of most of those speakers. The civilization of our country is degraded by the vulgar and ignorant spirit of the first principles promulgated in the speeches. "We shall take it or we will leave it," said one; "right!" and "the weaker who cannot help themselves, w go to the wall." And the religions of our country, w have been so conscientious and so gainers of respect from non-Christians, our countrymen, outraged the ferocity which breathes through the words and trails of most of the speakers. I therefore deny that the meeting was a success. It was a failure. On Thursday was anything else but the same old clique and a very small clique, whose anti-Chinese madness and ferocity is a shame and a disgrace to our country.

is perfectly fair that such immigration should be restricted and regulated; but the principle on which this restriction is carried out should be one which will not disgrace us as a nation. It should be one which will not be a source of "accrued race, do not regard them as," "beasts in human form." Do not attempt to set up your back and say to Chinamen "shall enter here," and do not pressed, under the name of morality, to restrict the immigration of the English and Irish immorality. The speech is based on the immorality of London. The speech is based on the face of the fact that the disease of small-pox is raging in London. There are many and good ways by which Chinese immigration should be restricted without being based on the immorality of London. A restrictive law may be passed which will keep the under control without exposing ourselves to the absolute possibility of demanding that we shall be free to go anywhere we please, and that we shall be able to do anything we shall be allowed to come among us. I am, etc. JOHN Mc'GIBSON

The remaining dredges, the Fitzroy has been at the Macleay for the whole five years, and has raised 530,445 tons for a cost of £21,400; the Pluto has been at the Shoalhaven for the same time, and has raised 461,830 tons for £7,023; the Titan has been at Lake Macquarie and the Hawkesbury, and has raised 15,090 tons for £21,083; and the Clarence has been at the river of that name for the last two years of the period, and has raised 103,120 tons for a cost of £21,005, all four raising 1,113,394 tons at an average cost of £19.4d. per ton. The work done by all the ten dredges, two of which were in commission for only part of the period, consists of 7,964,904 tons of rock, sand, and silt raised and disposed of at a cost of £282,160, or an average of 84d. per ton. The estimate for the year 1880 is a total of 1,341,405 tons dredged at a cost of 55s.32d., which gives an average of nearly 50d. per ton. This is an increase of nearly one-fourth upon the average cost per ton during the previous quinquennium. But to judge fairly whether this cost is excessive or

In the case of some of the dredges which he sent the material to sea, Mr. MORTART says:—"The cost of dredging has been enhanced by detentions during stormy weather." It is usually held that the cheapest way of getting rid of detritus, as of sewage, is to pour it into the neighbouring ocean; but if these delays on account of rough weather keep the dredges idle for any length of time it might be cheaper to dispose of the material in some other way. In spite of all drawbacks the Chief Engineer says:—"I think it will be conceded that our dredging operations compare very favourably with any other system in any part of the world." The public would have been better advised to make this concession if Mr. MORTART had given instances of the cost of similar work elsewhere, for there are few people who possess this information. Some surprisingly cheap work has been done in the United States by the clamshell dredge, and by importing two of PRIESTMAN'S grab dredges or cranes, which are constructed upon a similar

It would be interesting to know what effect the removal of more than nine million tons of silt, sand, and rock during the last six years has had upon the accommodation of our harbours and rivers. The report is very meagre in information of this kind, without which nobody can say whether the work is worth its cost. The only statements con-ained in the report under this head are by the inspector, Mr. A. B. PONTIS, who says:—

"I have always held that in awkward places and detached rock can be removed with advantage by a crane with bucket and grab, just as I have ever maintained that mechanical ingenuity has not yet devised a contrivance to deal as economically and effectively with our principal obstructions, compact sandbeds, as the elevator, bucket, and ladder system, which, at such comparatively small cost, and in so short a time, removed three million tons of sand at Newcastle, virtually, as the Harbour Master humorously put it, 'turning his harbour inside out,' and which under conditions of extraordinary efficiency has, by the clearing away of one and a quarter million tons of sea sand at Sydney Heads, given us a channel equal to the requirements of the largest vessel that England owns.' It is highly gratifying to learn that Newcastle harbour has been turned inside out," and that the entrance at Sydney Heads has been deepened; but could not the results be given more definitely? Are the compact sand beds likely to form again, or have the obstructions been permanently removed? What has been the effect of the breakwater at Newcastle, and of the piers at Lake Macquarie? Is there any prospect of making the Clarence a safe port? Parliament is beginning to understand the importance of navigation, and to vote money

The principal achievement of Mr. MORIARTY, next to the practical duties of his profession, has been to reorganize the dredge department, and this he has done thoroughly. "Promotion by seniority and merit," he says, "is now rendered certain in the dredge service, and no employee, however devoid he may be of influneal friends, or removed from headquarters, need fear being passed over when his time for promotion comes." Would that all other departments were equally free from the bias of political influence! The Engineer adds— "Some plan of providing for the old hands is much needed to complete the system, and is, I think, practicable; and with your permission I purpose shortly submitting an arrangement for your consideration having this end in view." The whole Civil Service greatly to be at peace. Some of the saddest reverses which British soldiers have suffered during the last half century have taken place in that quarter. A few months since not many were sanguine enough to hope that hostilities would be brought to an end for some time to come. In addition to the quarrel with the Boers, which was serious enough, one Kafir tribe after another was meditating rebellion. Besides the Basutos, the Golekas, the Tamboekies, the Matabeles, and the Ngunis, in arms. The

and the rancor was in the air. The rancor was also watching for their opportunity, while the great Pondo chiefs, UNGIKELA and UNGIKISO, were anxiously considering whether their interests would be best served by peace or war. The Basutos themselves were able to send twelve men into the field for every one that the Cape Government were able to furnish; and it was with that Government that the responsibility for the Basuto quarrel lay. The Basuto, indeed, led to the quarrel last between three and four or five years ago, some twelve or fourteen months ago. According to Sir BARTLE FRERE, the Basutos of Basutoland have not existed beyond a generation or so. About twelve years ago, at the instance of their great chief MESHENI, they were brought under English authority, and since that time
